

I support media diversity

I have been following the discussion regarding the revision of FCC rules on media ownership and I am adamantly opposed to any changes. In fact, I prefer the old rules that prevented Clear Channel to dominate radio and limit public debate. I agree that the new rules will increase efficiency and profitability, drawing much needed capital into the industry. However, democracy is anything but efficient. We are talking about fairness and transparency. The new rules obliterates both. They are simply un-American as they violate our very principles. An open, inefficient system is far better than an efficient closed one.
